ABSTRACTThe economic crisis is feeding the recession in Portuguese society and is a common theme in many countries. As a consequence, the topic of sexual violence has been in the spotlight, making it a matter of public interest. The aim of this study is to analyze the main consequences of sexual violence on the lives of the victims in three cases. A qualitative method was used and the analysis was made through thematic content analysis. The application of the content analysis method was based on the technique of analysis with explanatory themes. It was found that sexual violence has been damaging to the victims, but not to the society as a whole, when the effects are analyzed from a personal viewpoint, a more global understanding of the issue is obtained. There is a great increase in the number of women molested, raped and other violent acts committed against women in the world. We still often hear non-stop coverage about incidents of sexual violence that bring the world to a standstill. In fact, the number of women and girls who are victims of such acts is rising. There are many factors that lead to the increase of this phenomena such as unemployment, poverty, the lack of social projects, the collapse of traditional values, the increased consumption, etc. These acts pose several serious problems for all aspects of women's lives, such as physical, mental and social health. The paper deals with the subject of sexual violence, by analyzing a real case. The last decade has witnessed a dramatic increase in the number of women sexually abused and violently raped. There is solid evidence that points to the fact that sexual violence is a major global public health problem. To put this in perspective, it is important to keep in mind that, in any given year in the world, between 20 and 25 million women and girls are subjected to some sort of sexual violence (UNICEF 2005). This is a figure that shows that this problem is hardly being controlled. But why this increase? There are many factors that are partially connected. They are also related to different aspects of the public and private sphere. The main problem is that the sexual abuse and violence against women is still little known, and there are no plans or campaigns aimed at eradicating it. They are being ignored by society, or not seriously addressed. Governments do not set aside enough funds for the implementation of measures to control the problem and for the reintegration of the victims (Human Rights Watch 2005). Researchers and professionals, when comparing what happened in the past, also seem to have forgotten that the number of women who have
